Was taken from this country into a virginia skirmishing, he proceeded across the five to the seene of action, but arrived too late to the engagement. He was enthusiastively cally rece vad, however, by the brave men who had participated in the skirmish. One poor fellow lay in the tent, mortally wounded in the action, and Gen. McClellan went to his the action, and Gen. McClellan went to his the action, and Gen. McClellan went to his side, and spoke some words of encouragement to him. The brave fellow, with the last spasmodic effort rose to his feet, gave his gallant commander the military salute, and fell back on his cot, a corpse. It was by such little acts of kindness and attention that the First Napoleon made himself the idol of his army, and the affection of our soldiery for their brave leader is evidence that human nature was the same then as now.

The people of Belmont county will be addressed upon the duty of Patriots and Free men in this erisis, at the following times and breett (minus the Bell) man in this county will support that ticket. The men who are engaged in the bitter and unprincipled fight against that ticket are not Democrats—they are Secessionists,—enemies of their country.

We would like to know why the Gasette dont publish James R Morti's letter.

Mr. Morris is the Democratic Congressman for this district, and has made a special request that all the papers in the district should publish his letter, but the editor of the Gasette, because Mr. Morris is a Union man and not a Secessionist, refuses to publish it, and yet he professes to be a Denocrat and a Union man. Heaven save us from such Union men. Heaven save us from such Union men, from such Democrat and a Union men. Heaven save us from such Union men, from such Democrat and a Union men. Heaven such definition from Suntal State of the lateration of the draw of the dra have been generally understood. The failure of many to appreciate them has doubtless, given rise to much dissatisfaction that ought not to exist. He had a Department vast portions of which were to be conquered from a strongly entrenched enemy. He had not merely to assure Missouri to the Union, but restore to it the Seceded States of the Mississippi valley to the Gulf. His plan could not be narrowed to meet the urgent meeds of Missouri alone. While it included these, it must temporarily subordinate many of her immediate interests to the grand work before him. For this work all the means were to be created. Recruits had to be gathered, drilled, organized into armies, disciplined, and furnished with munitions, camp equipage, provisions, &c., while the disciplined, and furnished with munitious, camp equipage, provisions, &e., while the most of the material and men were to be brought from other States. Fremout found almost everything remaining to be done.—Lyon had accomplished much, and most nobly, for he had averted immediate and imminent peril and had saved St. Louis and other points as a base of military operations. The great task, however, was still to be performed, and the three months' volunteers were just approaching the avaigation. be performed, and the three months vol-unteerswere just approaching the expiration of their term. The enemy was mustering in formidable numbers, and menacing several important posts at once. No man ever more thoroughly and sagaciously studied his po-sition, or exerted himself with greater effec-tions as to discharge pressure and more. Not all the "pride, pomp and circumstance" of war which makes this city and its surroundings one wast camp, nor the fact that a hostile army of tens, maybe hundreds of thousands, is within a few hours march of the capital, can make "Old Abe" foregood to the capital, can make "Old Abe" foregood to discharge pressing and mome to one duties than, in the midst of these discussions or primary in the slightest deliverees. Fremont has done,— True enough, he has not yet swept the doom-ed traitors from the land. His labors have been the herculear ones of swift and ample preparation in the face of the vigilant enemy. In three brief months he has effected what

In three brief months he has effected what most executive men would have regarded as impossible to accomplish in less than six or eight. The results will, doubtless, before long appear in a most palpable shape, which all the world will recognize. In the meantime, no friend of the Union should fail to do his utmost to strengthen the hands of the indefatigable Pathfinder.

No other name than this could have ralified the multitudes that have flocked, and are still thronging to our aid from Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, New York, and even New England. Everywhere men say, "Let us stand by Fremont in the West, for he does not know how to fail in anything he undertakes!" The confidence felt in him by patriots is not greater than the dread of him among the traitors. They have become peculiarly wary and dubious of Missouri, and vexationally shy of Fremont's well appointed and comparatively well disciplined troops.—
